What Is A Fair Profit?

WHAT IS "A FAIR PROFIT?" A lumber dealer of North York, Ontario, James J. McGinn, by name, has fallen foul of the courts. Mr. McGinn, it appears, is not a regular dealer in nails, but just to help out his customers for lumber, procured 1,532 kegs of nails which he retailed. Where he made a mistake was in calculating that dealer McGinn should have been content with a profit of $65.16. He arrived at this figure after taking the evidence of several dealers in nails who stated that the average rate of profit was 12.7 percent. Instead of that Mr. McGinn gathered in a profit of $3,661.48!

Defence counsel urged that "under our democratic system you are entitled to make a profit."

A prominent company president recently told the Ottawa parliamentary investigation committee that his policy was to buy at the lowest possible price and sell at the highest possible price. "How was a man to know," he asked "when he was selling at too high a price?"

Magistrate Thomas Elmore replied as reported in the Toronto press: "I have no sympathy with this man. Here is a man, not even a regular dealer in nails, who sets up a hole in the wall (office) and sees there is a shortage of nails and takes advantage of the situation." He thereupon fined the accused $3,000 and costs under W.T.P.B. regulations as established by order in council 8528 of November 1, 1911. The charge covered the period December 1, 1917 to April 16, 1918.

Every consumer who has had to purchase nails since the close of the war will endorse his Lordships judgment. In view of the general public it will form a welcome precedent which should be widely acted upon. Mr. McGinn may not be aware of it but it is greedy men like himself, operating as private traders or corporations executives, who have brought private enterprise into disrepute.

But perhaps our applause may be premature. The principle involved is a very important one. Dealer McGinn is believed to be the first Canadian business man to be fined for selling a commodity no longer under a price ceiling. The case will probably be appealed.—The Country Guide.

THERE IS NO MYSTERY.

Notwithstanding all speculation now being heard about it, including a possible early appeal to the people for a mandate of his own, an extensive trip across this country, wide Cabinet reorganization, etc., yet it is believed in well-informed quarters along Parliament Hill that there is no mystery why Premier King's successor External Affairs Minister Louis St. Laurent, is not going overseas to lead Canada's delegation at the Assembly of the United Nations in Paris in September, nor is he likely to attend the Commonwealth Prime Minister's Conference in London in October, though it is not absolutely certain about the latter trip. If his presence should be considered necessary.

It is understood here that the new leader of the Canadian Government is simply not going overseas at present to attend any such lengthy international gatherings because there are pressing domestic problems which he feels need his personal attention within Canada. In fact, according to authoritative sources here, he is anxious to make essential preparation for the coming session of Parliament which is due to open not long from now or not long after he is assuming the active leadership as head of the new administration.

It should be emphasized that, as Acting Prime Minister while Premier King will be overseas he will be even now assuming immediate direction of all policy matters of the Government. He will be preparing the plans for the coming sessions and other important tasks awaiting his personal attention will include arrangements for a Cabinet reorganization, though this is expected not to be extensive at this time but still may include some surprises, judging from gossip in political circles along Parliament Hill where it is forecast that at least two present Parliamentary Assistants may become Ministers, one or two Ministers may retire and a former Minister may return to the Cabinet. Then again it is known here that Mr. St.

Laurent may want to handle the negotiations for Newfoundland's entry into Confederation as a tenth province by personal direction of the final dealings; the appeal of the provincial governments on the freight rate boosts, and many other pressing domestic problems which will require his presence in this capital as head of the new administration. Obviously there is no mystery why Mr. St. Laurent has preferred to remain here rather than lead the two important delegations overseas for lengthy meetings.

STILL LEGAL THEY SAY

The intensive spy hunt and probe in Washington where swift action is being taken against Communists, including the arrest of William Foster as head of the Communist party of the United States and other top ranking leaders of the party may not necessarily lead to similar moves in Ottawa. It is learned, though the authorities here are on the alert and prepared to stamp out quickly any Communist activities which violate the law of this land. But it is significant for the man in the street in Canada to bear in mind that the Communist Party in this country is still apparently legal an entity even though denounced by all political forces.

At the last session of Parliament a private bill was presented here that would have made it illegal as a party but the House of Commons somehow did not vote on it. This bill, in the name of Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal MP for Quebec—Montmorency, aimed to make the Labor-Progressive Party, actually a Communist group, an illegal organization. However, no such action was taken though there is a belief that an attempt to ban this party will be made when the House gathers again, probably at the beginning of the coming year. In the meantime the deportation of labor leaders suspected of Communist leanings and who come to Canada from United States where things are being made "hot" for them now and the "screening" of immigrants coming here from abroad to prevent any Communists from entering Canada are part of the general campaign by the Canadian authorities to fight Communism in this country, with the understanding along Parliament Hill that the Canadian authorities are co-operating rather closely with officials of other democratic governments to curb Communist activities, even though at least on the surface, such actions by the authorities here are not alike to those taken now by authorities in Washington and elsewhere, especially the arrest of the top ranking

CONSERVING SUPPLIES

In order to conserve Canada's butter supplies, it is suggested here that a number of actions may be taken to see that the "domestic disappearance" does not continue to grow at its current rate, with the consumption per capita being higher in the latest official report and the so-called "domestic disappearance" being greater than last year at the same time. Among the proposals suggested are restrictions on butter contents of gift parcels sent overseas, limits on amount of butter tourists can take out of Canada etc., especially the latter since it is believed that, with butter selling at much higher prices in U.S. as "celing" rules prevail there, fairly large quantities of butter have disappeared through tourist purchases, this being particularly true near border points.

SALES ARE DROPPING

Evidence before the Royal Commission on Prices here has disclosed that orders received by Canadian shoe manufacturers from retailers are dropping so far this year, though some manufacturers claimed that this was not correct in their own cases. One well-known Canadian shoe firm executive told the Commission that his firm's sales have declined 25% attributing this drop to "buyers resistance" to high prices and efforts of retailers to keep their stock down now. However, other manufacturers asserted that their orders were holding up well so far, obviously indicating that sales conditions in shoes were extremely unsettled at present.

BLAME OTTAWA FOR SUGAR BEET SHORTAGE

Canadian sugar beet growers are blaming federal controls for the steady decline in production according to Canadian Grocer. They contend the restrictions favor importation of raw cane sugar.

At the rate sugar has been consumed in Canada during the first part of 1948, it is calculated that about 1,300,000 lbs of the refined product will be required to satisfy the nation's sweet tooth.

"If this turns out to be correct says the grocery business newspaper, lots

"there isn't going to be a sufficient quantity of beets to see us through the winter up to the opening of navigation in May next year. That, in turn, would mean we would have to import, say, 200,000,000 lbs more of raw sugar, most of which would have to come from United States dollar countries."

The business paper points out that in the opinion of the growers, an additional 100,000,000 lbs of beet might have been produced, thus saving a good many United States dollars.

had Ottawa adopted their suggestion.

Lethbridge Experimental Station Weekly Letter

GULLY EROSION CONTROL BY CONTOUR DYKES

The spring of 1948 will be well remembered in many districts for the serious gully erosion caused by spring runoff water. Many of the gullies formed have caused inconvenience in farming operations throughout the year and unless further gullying is stopped serious damage to fields may result.

Fall is the time when gully control should be given attention. There are two methods of control. If a gully usually carries a large volume of runoff water it is best to seed it to grass. A previous weekly letter has dealt with this type of control. Where the amount of water carried is not excessive contour dykes can be constructed across the gully to carry water away from the gully and seeding to grass is not necessary. Both methods of control have proved quite successful on southern Alberta stublands.

Before constructing contour dykes it is first necessary to fill in the eroded gully so that farm machinery can cross without difficulty. This can be done by ploughing in both sides and finishing with a small grader. The one-way disk can replace the plough in this work. When this job is completed the bottom of the draw should be about ten feet wide and level and the sides should be sloped. The construction of contour dykes can now be done.

Three or four contour dykes in a half mile usually are sufficient with the first one being constructed at the top of the draw. The plough, grader, and one-way disk can be used in constructing contour dykes. When the dyke is completed it should be at least ten feet wide and about sixteen inches high and the ditch on the upper side should be about sixteen inches deep. The length depends on the contour of the land, the dykes being led to places where erosion will not take place. Starting at the draw the grade should be about six inches to one hundred feet, and when the water is safely away from the draw the grade is lessened until the last one hundred feet is level.

Gully erosion control is not difficult and does not take much time. The time spent is more than made up by eliminating the inconvenience and subsequent serious damage caused by the presence of gullies.

WEEKLY WIND UP

Canada is not likely to interfere if Newfoundland's Responsible Government party, which was defeated in the last referendum makes any move to fight union through the British Parliament, though plans are going ahead now in governmental circles here to bring about such a union as soon as possible in accord with the wishes of the majority of the people of Newfoundland. Indeed, Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, newly named Prime Minister designate to succeed Premier King, will give personal attention to future negotiations on the precise terms.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By Dr. E. J. GREANEY

Director, Line Elevator Farm Service, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Prevent Harvesting Losses

Care in harvesting and threshing small grain crops, including flax, is one of the surest and simplest ways of reducing production costs and increasing the average cash return per acre on farms in Western Canada.

Harvesting With Combines. The combine has been widely adopted by prairie farmers for harvesting and threshing grain crops. Although its introduction has meant a substantial decrease in harvesting costs, it has not been without its disadvantages. Combines, large and small, can only be operated economically if they are operated efficiently. It profits a farmer little to reduce his harvesting cost if he loses anywhere from 2 to 5 bushels of grain per acre by the use of careless combine-harvesting methods. For best results, the principal parts of the combine, namely, the header, the thresher, the separator, and the cleaning device, must be given proper care and always kept in proper adjustment.

Combine-harvest Problems. One problem peculiar to combine harvest is the tendency for combine operators to "beat the gun" and start harvest before the grain is ripe or dry enough. The harvest of grain before it has reached full maturity means a sacrifice in yield with no advantage as to quality (grade). On the other hand, serious yield losses may result from delayed harvest. The stage of maturity at which to combine grain crops for the best results is of extreme importance. Farmers can overcome many of the difficulties encountered in harvesting with the combine by giving special attention to the ripening characteristics of the crops, and to weed control.

Barley, particularly malting barley, and flax present special harvesting problems. These crops must be harvested and threshed with the utmost care if heavy losses from weathered, skinned or peeled, fractured, broken, and otherwise damaged kernels, is to be avoided. Today, no grain farmer can afford to have his crop carelessly handled at harvest time. Only by proper care in harvesting operations is it possible for him to take full advantage of its ability to produce high returns. At harvest time, "care means money."

NEWS NOTES

Mrs. Honnie Heninger motored a number of ladies to Cardston to attend a party given by Mrs. Burton for her sister Mrs. Roxie Robins.

Monday evening a family party was held at the home of Ellis Heninger for his son Jim when the guest of honor received a lovely leather brief case as a farewell gift.

A Mutual gathering of 4th ward officers and teachers was held Monday night when the group enjoyed many contest games in their reel to gether, under the direction of Dick Cooper and Jerome Platt. Prizes went to Ted Meeks, Jim Bridge and Athol Cooper.

"Boy, if I don't get rid of this cold soon, I'll be a dead-end," moaned the jockey to the exercise boy.

"Buddy, do what the doctor said," asked the boy.

"Now", replied the jockey. "The sign on his door said 10 to 1 and I wouldn't monkey with a long shot like that!"

"Who's the responsible man here?" asked the caller.

"If you mean the fellow that always gets the blame," answered the office boy, "you're speaking to him now."

Fighting wit heath other causes trouble. Fighting for each other solves it.

Uncle Jeff was telling about the death of a nephew who had never amounted to much.

"What was the complaint?" uncle Jeff was asked.

"Wasn't no complaint," uncle Jeff answered. "Everybody was satisfied."

Lacy: Nobody will ever care for me. Jack: Don't say that, Lacy. After all, in this world there's a man for every woman. It's a wonderful arrangement.

Lacy: I don't want to change it—just want to get in on it.
